

SEPTEMBER EMAIL for your REFERRAL PARTNERS
I HELP EMPTY NESTERS

[GREETING]

Every fall, I hear friends, associates and clients talk about the challenges of the “Empty Nest”. Whether people are facing a quiet house for the first time or have been in this phase for many years, it’s common for this time of the year to trigger a whole host of emotions for new and experienced empty nesters.

The empty nest phase of life holds many opportunities for freedom and leisure, but many find that the empty nest can also bring new challenges. Changes in employment or income, illness, divorce, or caregiving responsibilities can add complexity to a time that was expected to be tranquil and relaxed.

We see that people in the empty nest phase often decide to modify their existing living spaces or relocate. It’s also a time when older parents may begin to need help moving as well.

We’re here to help you support your clients who are in this stage of life! Our experienced team can help with the specific needs of empty nesters:

Decluttering, organizing and breathing new life into their surroundings.
Re-purposing rooms in your existing home to suit their current needs.
Managing complex moves that direct their belongings to several different destinations, including vacation homes, short-term, and long term storage.

Your empty nest clients may enjoy this article about coping:

Five Ways to Cope with an Empty Nest

<https://hometrainingpros.com/2021/08/06/five-ways-to-cope-with-an-empty-nest/>

I would be happy to offer a free consultation or even just friendly advice to any of your clients who are facing an empty nest this fall. [HERES THE BEST WAY TO REACH ME]

[YOUR SIGN OFF]